GlaxoSmithKline Announces Expansion of Patient Assistance Program to Include TYKERB®

Philadelphia, PA, March 13, 2007 — GlaxoSmithKline [NYSE:GSK] has confirmed that its new treatment TYKERB® (lapatinib) will be available through Commitment to Access, the company's program that provides low income patients with access to GSK products used in an outpatient setting in the United States.

As part of Commitment to Access, patients who have been prescribed TYKERB and have no insurance coverage may be eligible to receive TYKERB free of charge if they live in one of the 50 states or the District of Columbia and their income is at or below 500 percent of the federal poverty level (For example, $68,450 for a household of two. Income eligibility is adjusted for household size).<sup>1</sup>

For patients enrolled in a Medicare Part D plan, eligibility also requires documentation of $600 in expenditures on prescription medicines in the current calendar year. Patients who are eligible for Medicare and who have incomes below 135 percent of the federal poverty level may not be eligible for GSK's patient assistance programs if they qualify for full assistance under Medicare.

More information regarding Commitment to Access is available at www.CommitmentToAccess.com and by calling 1-866-475-3678.
